Problem setting. Today, a large number of international ratings and indices offer to assess the level of social, economic and political transformations in different countries. Ukraine is no exception. The intensification of European integration processes in our country constantly encourages the need to develop all areas and areas in which you can increase the competitiveness of the state and build your own strategy of behavior. Thus, the study of various ratings and indices that assess and characterize the sphere of public administration in Ukraine becomes relevant, given also the need to increase the confidence of European partners in the chosen strategy towards democracy.

Recent researches and publications analysis. Various aspects of the functioning of the state (social, economic, political) have been studied in numerous works of scientists: A. P. Duki, H.A. Kukharska, N.A Marchenko, A.N. Tishchenko and others.

Main objective of the article. Investigate the current position of Ukraine in the systems of modern international dimensions, which allow to generally characterize the sphere of public administration of our state.

Paper main body. The article examines the position of Ukraine in the systems of modern international measurements, which allow to characterize the efficiency of the public management sphere. It is noted that public management is a relatively new area of research in domestic science, therefore, a unified approach has not yet been formed to determine the criteria for its assessment, which would take into account national characteristics. It has been determined that the available number of existing ratings and indices make it possible to describe the situation in the country in general terms and provide a comprehensive social, economic or political assessment.

Conclusions. For our country, the importance of positions in international rankings indicate an insufficient level of development of public administration. At the same time, there are positive changes in the direction of the implemented reforms, as well as increasing the level of responsibility to the world community of public authorities.
